PEKING BORROWS $6,000,000 FROM CHINESE GROUP?

Report Says Loan Is Signed With Railway Revenue As Security

ACT IS SIGNIFICANT

Body Originally Organised For Consortium Adopts Different Policy

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 14.—A loan for the purchase of railway cars is being signed this afternoon.

The terms are as follows: Amount, $6,000,000; interest, eight percent; price, $95; discount, one percent; security, part of the Peking-Hankow Railway revenue which is not mortgaged to foreign loans.

The Chinese banking group is appointing a delegate to examine the cars on delivery.

Reuter's does not say clearly who is lending.

From the concluding sentence, it may be construed to mean that the money is being advanced by the Chinese banking group. If so, the loan will be most significant in that it is the first loan to be made by the Chinese Group, which, if admitted to the Consortium, will make it the first loan made by the Consortium, whose stipulations and terms would set a precedent to all other loans to be made by the Consortium.

However, from the recent statements made by Mr. Fredrick W. Stevens, the American representative, it will be a long time before the Consortium, as a body, can lend any money to China. Therefore it is considered that the Consortium could not be made a party to this loan. The attitude of the Consortium towards the Chinese group, which was formed essentially as a constituent of the Consortium itself, will be interesting to watch.

ABANDON FIXED COAL CHARGES IN SCOTLAND

Return To Pre-War Competitive Basis Caused By Glut Of Stocks

(Reuter's Service)

London, January 13.—Owing to the glut of coal stocks, Scottish coal-masters have agreed to abandon fixed prices in exporting coal, and to transact all future business on pre-war competitive lines.

More coal is now being produced in Scotland than is marketable and the railway sidings are congested with unwanted loaded waggons. The industrial demand has diminished one-third as the steel-works are running only three-fourths of their capacity, while the disturbed condition of Ireland has curtailed export to that country.

Owing to the slump in shipping, sixty vessels have been indefinitely laid up at Tyneside. Dozens of others have left foreign ports for a like purpose, and many others are lying in the river awaiting cargoes.

It is stated that coal can now be shipped and delivered to Norway from Australia, a pound per ton cheaper than from England.

London, Jan. 14.—One result of the abundance of fuel supplies is that the Sheffield manufacturers have made a big cut in the prices of iron and steel, and bright drawn steel is now £5 a ton lower.

The depression in the coal export trade has led to short-time working in the Monmouth mines, and 2,000 miners are rendered idle.

Furbush On Trial For Life; How Richard Hazelton Was Shot Is Told By Witnesses

Formidable Array Of Testimony For Government Will Be Continued When Hearing Is Resumed In U. S. Court Monday

The murder trial of Henry B. Furbush, which is the outcome of the fatal shooting of Richard F. Hazelton in the El Dorado Cafe on the night of December 13 opened yesterday in the United States Court for China before Judge C. S. Lobingier and will be resumed at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Seventeen witnesses for the Government were heard in the course of the day and their testimony—all aimed at fixing the guilt for the crime upon the accused seaman—already has created a formidable situation for the defense. Ten more witnesses for the Government are yet to be heard, it was announced yesterday.

The prosecution is being conducted by Maj. C. P. Holcomb, United States District Attorney and Mr. E. B. Rose, special United States Attorney. Messrs. M. L. Heen and Leonard Hartigan are defending Furbush.

CROWD AT TRIAL

When the hearing opened yesterday every seat in the court room was occupied while an overflow throng of spectators stood close packed in the entrance from the corridor. Dr. Luther Freeman, pastor of the Community church, was one of the throng units of which were drawn from the Trenches as well as from commercial and professional walks. Among others present was the class in jurisprudence of St. John's University with Prof. D. Roberts.

Furbush, the defendant, was somewhat aptly described in the words of one witness who said he was a "Charlie Chaplin sort of a man." He is a slender and undersized and when he appeared yesterday in brown suit and bow tie it was apparent from his manner that his nerves were on tension and he was obviously apprehensive.

For the first time Furbush's attorneys yesterday gave an indication of what the line of defense is to be. This was done when Mr. Heen made a brief response to the opening statement of the prosecution made by Major Holcomb. Mr. Heen indicated that a plea of temporary insanity would be presented.

OPENING STATEMENT

Major Holcomb's opening statement for the Government was as follows:

The Government will show that Furbush who was assistant engineer on a shipping board ship the Edgehill left the ship early in the evening on December 13 accompanied by another assistant engineer named Quinn; that they left the ship in ricshas and at the time of leaving that the accused had a pistol with him and after coming into the city they went to at least two bars and had several drinks apiece; that they then left a bar on Broadway and went by ricksha to the El Dorado Cafe on Jukong Road which is just outside the boundaries of the International Settlement; that after going into the El Dorado Cafe Furbush and Quinn ordered drinks but that they did not touch the drinks they ordered; that they seemed to be in a disorderly frame of mind and their actions prove that they were disorderly.

They went to an adjoining table and sat down uninvited where there were two Americans or at least one American, and started an argument with one of them taking hold of his hand and starting a fracas there in which the stove was upset. The deceased Hazelton, who had come to the cafe early in the evening with three friends was sitting at another table less than 30 ft. away from the table where the accused was creating a disturbance.

He went over and settled or quieted the trouble and took the accused with his companion,

Dissolution Of Labor Confederation Is Ordered

French Workers' Leaders Declare They Will Challenge Decision Of Court

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, January 13.—The Correctional Court, after a protracted trial, has dissolved the General Confederation of Labor and imposed a fine on Jouhaux and four other leaders, of 100 francs, and payment of costs of the prosecution initiated by M. Millerand's Government, on account of the Confederation's activities during the railway strike last May, in calling sympathetic strikes in industries essential to the life of the country.

The Court has ordered the property of the Confederation to be liquidated.

Paris, Jan. 14.—The General Confederation of Labor, aghast at the sentence of the Correctional Court, has issued a manifesto, stating its intention to challenge the decision, dissolving it. It violently attacks the Government, and vehemently asserts that Labor will never agree to the dissolution of the Confederation.

BRITISH OFFICER HELD FOR DEATH OF JAP PEDLER

W. E. Frazer Of Steamship Persian Prince To Be Tried Soon

The preliminary examination of Mr. W. E. Frazer, second officer of the British steamer Persian Prince, who is charged with having caused the death of a Japanese pedler, has resulted in a formal charge of murder being placed against him. The examination was held by Judge T. Nagaoka, who has directed that Frazer be tried. The date of the trial has been set for January 20.

The charge specifies that Frazer caused the death of a Japanese youth named G. Suzuki, who came on board the Persian Prince the afternoon of November 19. It is alleged that Frazer ordered the boy out of his cabin and when the youth slammed the cabin door followed him out and struck him.

The attorney for the defense, Mr. H. Sato, a prominent Yokohama lawyer, will introduce evidence to prove that the lad died of heart disease.

The examiners for the Government reported that Suzuki died from physical injuries.

The physicians who performed the post mortem examination will be called as witnesses.

Public Procurator I. Nakajima, Judge K. Imamura and two other judges will assist at the trial, which has been set to begin at 9 o'clock in the morning of January 20.

POISONOUS DRINK CAUSES DEATH OF BRITISH SAILOR

Coroner Scathingly Denounces Liquor Served In Hongkew Barrooms

A scathing indictment of the stuff served as liquor in the bars of Hongkew was delivered yesterday afternoon by Mr. G. W. King, British Coroner, when the inquest into the circumstances concering the death of Ernest D. Clarke, blue jacket from the British gunboat Kinsha, was resumed. Clarke was found dead in an alleyway off Yuenfong Road last Monday morning.

"Undoubtedly the victim in this case was killed by the liquor which had been supplied to him in Hongkew," declared Mr. King, "and I wish you (speaking to Detective Inspector Reeves) to bring the matter before the Commissioner of Police. I do not know if any steps can be taken about it."

"This man," he continued, "would be alive today but for the crude, terrible stuff which was pushed out to him to drink. This sort of thing ought to be absolutely stopped. It is terrible that such a fine young fellow should meet his death in this way. I think it is your duty to report this and see whether public opinion cannot do something."

Detective Inspector Reeves said that he would forward a report to the Commissioner.

Evidence as to the cause of the death of Clarke was developed through the post mortem examination made by Dr. J. E. Murray and Dr. Joy of the Kinsha and through an analysis made in the Health Department laboratories. The doctors' report showed Clarke to have been a man of normal health and apparently to have been in every way physically fit. There were no marks of violence. A verdict in accordance with the medical evidence was returned.

Birthday Of League Is Celebrated In London

(Reuter's Service)

London, January 13.—The first birthday of the League of Nations was imposingly celebrated at the Albert Hall yesterday with a full attendance of representatives of foreign and Dominion Governments, including Siam.

The principal speakers were Viscount Grey, Lord Robert Cecil (who represented South Africa on the League Assembly at Geneva), and Mr. George Barnes, M.P. (Labor delegate to the League Assembly for Great Britain).

The King telegraphed, declaring that there was every reason to be thankful for the work accomplished in the first year of the League's existence, and appealing to women of the British Empire to support the organisation, whose high ideals were the only guarantee for the future generations against desolating war.

The Premier, in a message, stated that the League embodied the deepest hopes of mankind. Its machinery had made a good start, and subsequent success depended upon the nations represented insisting on fair and open dealing with one another.

Lord Robert Cecil said that while the League had made mistakes and had missed opportunities, still, many difficulties had been overcome, and, he declared, anyone who said that it had done nothing, lied. The League had already grown in size, organisation, reputation and authority, and wherever it had been tested, it had been found adequate for the purpose for which it had been devised.

All those who are interested in aviation are invited to attend the tiffin meeting of the Pan-Pacific Association and Aero Club to be held at the Carlton on Tuesday at 12:15 o'clock, in honor of the aerial commission, Colonels F. In the afternoon, the commission called on General Ho Fung-lin, the Defense Commissioner. Today they will call on more local officials. Up to the [illegible] site, that land in Pootung belonging to the Whangpoo Conservancy Board known as Gough Island situated halfway between here and Woosung is considered by the commission as most suitable.

At the tiffin-meeting on Tuesday, President Brodie A. Clarke of the Aero Club will act as toastmaster and Colonel Holt will speak on the proposed service as well as trace the development of aviation in China. The speaker will be prepared to answer questions at the conclusion of his talk.

BRIAND AND VIVIANI ARE MENTIONED FOR CABINET

Millerand Prepares To Take Prompt Action In Crisis

LEYGUES A BUFFER

Retiring Premier Held Unenviable Position, Say Reports

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 13.—The Petit Parisien understands that President Millerand is anxious to deal with the Cabinet crisis as rapidly as possible. Among the names mentioned in this connection are those of M. Aristide Briand and M. Viviani for the Foreign Office and M. Poincare as Minister of Finance, while it is understood that M. Raiberti will continue as Minister of War and M. Sarraut as Minister for the Colonies.

London, Jan. 14.—The overthrow of the French Premier, M. Leygues, is ascribed to a variety of causes.

He has always been regarded as a sort of buffer between the two strong men, Millerland and Briand. M. Briand's accession to the Premiership was regarded as a certainty after M. Millerand's election as President. The latter, however, decided otherwise, and thus some bitterness has always remained.

LEYGUES FAVORED BRITISH

M. Leygues, moreover, has been condemned as too acquiescent toward the British point of view and insufficiently insistent for the interest of France, especially as regards strict execution of the Treaty of Versailles. The majority of members in the Chamber are very much dissatisfied over Germany's postponements and excuses, and look to the reparations money to repair French finances, which are seriously disorganised. The latent feeling against M. Leygues thus gradually rose to boiling-point.

Future experience must decide whether a new Cabinet with a so-called strong, firm policy, will promote or detract from the Anglo-French Entente.

SEEK STRONGER MAN

Berlin, Jan. 13.—The hopes and fears of Germany are reflected in the comment on the fall of the French Government, which is being keenly discussed in the newspapers as betokening a possible new phase of French post-war policy.

The reactionary organs express the view that the French Chamber wants a stronger man than M. Leygues to tackle Great Britain and Italy on the question of German disarmament, and anticipate a harsher policy toward Germany.

The Socialist papers, on the other hand, believe that France's financial difficulties will compel her to approach Germany with a view to reaching an economic, and ultimately a political understanding.

Reuter has already cabled that the French Chamber adjourned on January 12, after the Government had been defeated on a vote of confidence.

The following delayed telegram reporting the inaugural speeches in the Chamber and Senate at the opening of the session on January 11 should be read in the light of Tuesday's sensational development:

Paris, Jan. 12.—Parliament was re-opened yesterday with speeches from the two Doyens.

TO END CLASS ROW

M. Siegfried, Doyen of the Chamber, expressed his trust in France's future, and said that the French economic situation would soon be re-established by a rapid increase in exports. He explained the Republican platform for the betterment of moral and material conditions among the working classes, and declared finally that France should end the struggle between classes.

M. Denis, Doyen of the Senate, declared that the French Army should be strong enough to compel Germany to execute the Peace Treaty. He said that France would not be forced to stand alone as her English and American friends were not indifferent to the dangers threatening the world and civilisation. M. Denis concluded with an assertion of his unshakable faith in the future of the League of Nations.

Hupeh Volunteers, Armed With Farm Implements, Give Battle To Troops

Southern Troops Resisted By Populace When Attempt Is Made To Collect Taxes By Force Of Arms

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, January 10.—The warfare between Southern troops and the People's Volunteer Corps of Shihnan district in Western Hupeh has been renewed recently with greater vehemance this time than when the soldiers broke their faith in the compromise which they concluded with the people last month after they had been in open clash with each other and in which they promised to afford the people better treatment and more reasonable taxations they had been contending for.

When the troops were somewhat overshadowed by the overwhelming numbers of people's volunteer fighters in a clash, they resorted to compromise as a measure of quieting temporarily the resistant force of the people. They had no idea of keeping on friendly terms with the latter. Meanwhile they made all preparations to recruit their forces and concentrate their troops there with a view to reopening hostilities and thereby taking revenge on the people who had formed the People's Volunteer Corps to fight against them.

HIGHWAYS GUARDED

Besides assembling troops, the southern commanders also centered their troops at all important military posts in those districts. All the important highways and thoroughfares had been occupied and well guarded by soldiers. In all the four districts or hsien, which are collectively known as Shihnan district, the defence force of southern soldiers had been considerably increased. And the people knew well what they were about and opposed their quartering more troops. Their tyrannisers, the soldiers, however, ignored all such protestations and firmly entrenched themselves in that mountainous and secluded district.

Finally, in spite of all they could possibly do, the people's volunteers found the situation growing graver and found themselves in awkward and helpless position. The southern soldiers after vast preparations and mobilisations, were then in good trim to fight the People's Volunteer Corps in case such rose again against taxations.

DEMAND GRAIN TAX

The soldiers started the fire by demanding full payment of all grain taxes and other taxes due at the point of bayonet. Collectors were sent out from the camp to the villages to collect grain and money, and in case of refusal they resorted to coersion. This provoked the people more then before, and their cause of grievance being highly ostensible, the people resummoned all members of the Volunteer Corps from the four districts concerned, Laifeng, Hsienfung, Kienshih and Shuen-en. But this time the soldiers outwitted the people by taking hold of important military posts beforehand, which made it exceedingly difficult for the volunteers to center at the rendezvous. Thus the fighting force of the people was considerably reduced.

Thus the second struggle began. In Shuen-en district, over three thousand volunteers after several engagements were severely beaten by southern soldiers. Being without outside help from other corps, this group of volunteer fighters are at the mercy of their conquerers.

At the time of writing, no reports regarding casualties on both sides are available. But it is reported that as the people are armed only with those crude agricultural implements against the full array of southern troops, a large number of the former were killed. With this initial defeat at Shuen-en, other corps are expected to follow suit and surrender to the soldiers.

REPORTS OF FIGHTING

Some reports about the first fighting between southern troops and the People's Volunteer Corps are now to hand and may be illuminating as to the actual situation in Shihnan and the cause of animosities between the people and soldiers. Besides opium tax, grain taxation is the next principal source of revenue to the soldiers. They collect the grain tax right in the field, where seventy percent of the farmers hard-earned crop goes to feed the soldiers. For instance, if one farmer gets ten piculs, he must give seven piculs to soldiers and keeps the other three piculs for feeding his family and for sowing the next year's crop.

Besides the grain tax, the farmers have also to pay the land tax. The land tax is levied according to acreage of field disregarding the harvest of the year. Even if the farmer's crop is a complete failure and he has nothing to keep his own body and soul together, he has got to pay up his land tax some way or other.

Another report regarding the first fighting is also interesting. The People's Volunteer Corps were composed of men above the age of twenty, and the aggregated force was over 16,000 fighters. They [illegible] with the southern soldiers for seventeen days, and succeeded in driving the soldiers nearly out of Shihnan city gate, where some officials brought compromise of armistice between them.

The casualties on both sides were heavy. About 430 volunteers were killed in this fight of seventeen days. One commander, 37 officers and over 500 soldiers were the total death roll in the southern ranks.

Since the southern troops occupied the sequestered district of Shihnan early in, 1918, they have had a very leisured life by exacting their subsistance from the hard-working farmers. It was only until last December when people's patience was being tried to the breaking point that the people began to take up arms and defend their own interests.

'Aladdin' Tonight

The first performance of the A.D.C. pantomime "Aladdin" will be given at the Lyceum this evening and seat holders are reminded that it begins at 9 o'clock.

The dress rehearsal of the piece was held last evening and went off well, auguring a smooth running presentation tonight. Mrs. W. J. Isenman, whose services for the part of the "Princess O-Yu-Bu-Tee" the Committee was fortunate enough to secure on only twenty-four hours' notice when one of the members of the cast withdrew, sang her songs with remarkable precision and effect receiving an enthusiastic ovation on her entrance.

Ticket sales for all of the six advertised performances took another big spurt yesterday, the booking assuming record proportions.

SCHWAB RAPS AT PESSIMISTS

Tells Pennsylvania Society American Business Is 'Getting Relieved Of Impurities'

New York, Dec. 12.—Charles M. Schwab told the members of the Pennsylvania Society at their annual dinner in the Hotel Waldorf last night that he did not agree with the "prophets of despair" that the present condition of American business should be viewed with pessimism. He said the time called for economy in Government expenses as in private business and expenditure, and that during the period of return to normal conditions "we are getting relieved of the impurities in our business life."

Turning to Governor Sproul, who was chief guest at the dinner, Mr. Schwab urged Pennsylvania, "the keystone of our industrial arch," to take the lead in the return to normal conditions. He added that he could see nothing ahead but prosperity.

"Business in the United States ever since the war started had been, until very recently, upon a false basis," continued Mr. Schwab. "The disposition of many manufacturers had been to say not: 'Let me see your costs sheet,' but 'Let me see your statement of profits.'

"Now the true test of success in business is not profits but economy. Profits may be the result of good fortune, of a fleeting period of inflation, of temporary conditions of any kind, but a business structure which is built simply upon the profit sheet of the moment is built upon the sands. The only business foundations which are sure and steady are erected upon the rock of economy.

FORCED TO ECONOMISE

"The supreme virtue of the existing situation is that it is compelling every business man in America, in fact, every individual in America, to examine thoroughly his costs of doing business and his costs of living. The result of it all is to force business and to force individuals to start to economise and to save.

"The great need of the world today is to work hard and save. This applies not alone to the laboring man, but to the man of great means. There is no place in America today for the loafer.

"The laboring man is entitled to his full share for the contribution he makes to the value of an article. The laboring man should be taken into the fullest confidence of his employers. He should be so sure of getting his fair share of the wealth he produces that he will work with zeal and enthusiasm. Not merely increased production, but increased efficiency in production, is essential.

"Economy in Government expenditures is also of vital importance. We should expect and demand the same degree of efficiency in the conduct of our Government as we require in private business. Reckless expenditure by the Government, National, State or city, necessitates higher taxes. These taxes increase prices, and higher prices curtail consumption. The effect of a curtailment of consumption is to increase unemployment.

TAX REVISION CALLED FOR

"There is need of immediate revision of our tax laws. While the war lasted we have put up with a make-shift policy, badly conceived and badly executed. Now that the time for real readjustment has come it is the duty of citizens to see to it that taxes are not imposed which encourage extravagance and take from industry the opportunity to invest its earnings. Only by such investments can factories be kept running, and the more factories kept running at full time, the more men will be required to work, the greater will be their output and the higher their wages.

"The whole world owes the United States money and the whole world is hungry for the things the United States can supply. Not quite a year ago one of our great financiers returned from Europe and suggested that we create a revolving fund of $500,000,000 to finance the absolute requirements of Europe and start the countries in distress on their way to self-support. Perhaps he did not state the correct sum, but for lack of our ability to sell to Europe through having sufficient credit available, the value of the farm products of this country which Europe would like to buy has decreased during the last few months not hundreds of millions, but billions of dollars.

"If the business of the United States is to go forward as it must go forward, our people must take a world view. We must think internationally. We must trust in the good faith and in the productive power of Europe, sending to them our raw materials and goods to enable them to resume productivity, and accepting in payment therefor securities representing their productive activities.

"It is a hopeful sign of the time that the farmers and the small manufacturers of the country are beginning to recognise the vital importance of this factor in the situation."

Native Editor, On Lecture Tour, Defends British Rule In India

Rustom Rustomjee, of India, former editor of the Oriental Review, who is touring the United States lecturing on conditions in his native land. While not a loyalist, Mr. Rustomjee is not opposed to British rule in India because he believes India is not yet ready for self-government because there are so many races, religions and castes hostile to each other. Mr. Rustomjee says there are forty-eight different races, seventy-nine different languages and two thousand different sects in India. He believes that if the British should withdraw from India the conditions there would be worse than those in Russia and Mexico.

Break In Rail Service To North Hurts China, Say Peking Observers

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 14.—Considerable interest is attached in Peking to the reports of travelers on the Chinese Eastern Railway that the dislocation at Manchuria Station continues.

The reason for the breaking off of communication has never been explained. It was carried out by the orders of General Sung Hsiao-din, and apparently on his own initiative.

The Chinese guard, miles beyond Manchuria Station, receives supplies by cart.

According to information through Red sources, the Russian reactionary elements on the C. E. R. are responsible for this measure, and some color is given to this contention by the fact that the railway to Vladivostok, where Ataman Semenoff's men are stationed, has never been interrupted.

NO GAIN FOR CHINA

It is pointed out that China has nothing to gain by this dislocation, but throws herself open to the imputation of partiality, and seriously inconveniences the Chinese on both sides of the border. Furthermore, the repatriation of the Austrians and Germans in Chita, which China is carrying out with the agreement of the Allies, is thus temporarily suspended, and these refugees are in danger of starvation.

The general opinion is that there is something behind this dislocation which requires investigation. It has now continued for nearly a month.

GIVES NO REASON

General Sung has given no reason for his action, and none has been advanced by the Government.

The Japanese representative on the C. E. R. Technical Board has protested against the control and examination of freight by Chinese troops, on the ground that the Chinese guard has no right to interfere with traffic.

General Sung Hsiao-lin has referred the matter to the Government and the Mukden military authorities.

Peking, Jan. 14.—It is stated that the Ministry of Communications intends to begin the construction of the Chuchow-Hengchow section of the Canton-Hankow Railway in May. Surveyors have already been sent out.

Yarn Prices To Drop Belfast Prediction

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 14.—A big drop in the price of yarn—estimated at sixty percent—is forecasted from Belfast, in consequence of the lapse of an agreement between British and continental spinners, by which a free market is created.

It is anticipated that this will have favorable effects on the linen trade, and that there will also be a fall in the price of linen articles of thirty-five percent.

It is thought that yarn manufacturers and merchants will be helped over their losses if necessary.

France Refutes Tale Of Race Suicide

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Jan. 13.—There were 53,869 marriages solemnised in Paris in 1920 as compared with 31,950 in 1919.

The number of births registered in Paris in 1920 was 55,813, as compared with 48,736 in 1912.

The excess of births over deaths was 12,831 against 4,112 in 1913. These figures give the lie to those who talk of the depopulation of France, at least so far as Paris is concerned.

THE TRADE MARK OF RELIABLE

OAK

KD

IS THE BEST TOO GOOD FOR YOU?

No! And the sooner you realise that OAK is the one perfect wood for FLOORING, PANELLING, WAINSCOTING and all INTERIOR DECORATIONS, better.

The cost is not prohibitive, in fact it runs about the same as a first class carpet.

The arguments in favour of OAK are quite unanswerable; durability, cost, and last but by no means least, HYGIENE.

Insist that all lumber for flooring and panelling for interior work bears the "Three Pines" Trade Mark, and the letters "KD" signifying kiln-dried, thus ensuring its perfect quality, and suitability for the severe climatic conditions of China.

We give all orders personal attention. After you have placed your order with us, the flooring will be laid and all work carried out under the personal supervision of a foreign expert of the Company. We prefer to do this for you.

TEN THOUSAND DYING DAILY FROM FAMINE

Awful Toll In China Is Reported To People Of United States

(Reuter's Service)

Topeka, Kansas, January 13.—Dr. Charles Shellon, Editor of the Christian Herald, has received a cable from Minister Crane, declaring that the present famine is the greatest tragedy in the history of China. Ten thousand persons are dying daily.

Basing their plea on reports from investigators and relief workers in the famine districts, three of the relief organisations have petitioned the government to effect a speedy consummation of the Customs surtax loan and stop, so far as possible, the death rate which is increasing at an alarming rate. The petition which was addressed to their excellencies: President Hsu Shih-chang, Premier Chin Yun-peng and Minister of the Interior Chang Shih-tang, declares the funds in hand sufficient only for one-fifth of the work that already confronts the various committees.

ISSUE PETITION

The draft of the petition follows:

"On behalf of the Chinese and Foreign Famine Relief Committee of Shanghai, the North China Society for Famine Relief of Tientsin, and the United International Famine Relief Committee of Peking, we respectfully beg to submit to you the following consideration and petition.

"Our representatives together with the representatives of affiliated societies have the closest touch with famine condition gotten by months of work in investigation and relief in all areas. We are deeply concerned to learn from their reports that early fears are being justified by present fact. At least 15,000,000 people are not facing death by starvation and cold, thousands have already died, while hundreds of thousands have fled from their homes and are seeking refuge in other parts. At the same time, there is almost certainty of an epidemic of typhus and other diseases which in the weakened condition of the people will work terrible havoc in the loss of human life. We have no hesitancy in saying that the present is the greatest calamity of decades which the people of China have faced.

FUNDS INADEQUATE

"At the same time the relief funds are entirely inadequate to the meeting of the situation. The most liberal estimate sees funds in hand to save only three million people. It is therefore with the greatest pleasure we learn that the Chinese Government is about to complete negotiations for a loan of $4,000,000 with the Customs surtax as security and that the entire supervision of the administration and audit of this fund is to be under a body representative of the Government and the affiliated international relief societies. We believe that this method of use of the funds not only insures the best use thereof but also meets popular approval in China and abroad. Furthermore, each day's delay means the loss of very many lives and is creating popular discontent and disturbance throughout the country which may result in serious consequences. We beg therefore to urge that this loan be very speedily consummated."

The petition was signed by Lo Pa-hong, S. Y. Yeh, for the Shanghai Chinese-Foreign Relief Committee; J. B. Tayler for the North China International Society for Famine Relief; Wang Ta-hsieh, D. W. Edwards, for the United International Famine Relief Committee of Peking.

Wellington Koo Weds An Heiress From Java

Regarding the recent marriage of the Hon. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Minister to the Court of St. James, the Town Topics, of London, under date of December 20 publishes the following details:

Hon. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Minister to the Court of St. James, and China's senior representative at the assembly of the League of Nations, was married yesterday morning at the Chinese Legation in Brussels, to Hoeylai, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oetiongham, a prominent Chinese family in Java. Mr. Oetiongham is leader of the sugar industry in the East.

FORMERLY IN LONDON

The bride used to live in London, and was known to her friends as Countess Hoey Angel Caulfeild Stoker. Since the summer of last year she has been living on the Continent and in America. Some time ago she brought a divorce action against her husband. The facts of the case attracted a great attention in the London press.

The case threw some interesting light on the subject of mixed marriages, and also on various aspects of modern life and methods. One is perhaps able to wonder how Society will view the introduction of the Chinese Minister's new wife into exclusive of Diplomatic functions.

DIVORCED FIRST HUSBAND

Appended is the report from the Daily Telegraph of the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Wellington Koo last spring:

Mrs. Caulfeild-Stoker, a Chinese lady, obtained on April 19, 1920, a decree nisi for dissolution of marriage on the ground of the desertion and misconduct of her husband, Mr. Beecham Caulfeild-Stoker, and an order for the custody of the one child of the marriage. The suit was undefended.

The facts as stated in the evidence were that the parties were married at Samaragang, Java, on October 25, 1909.

Mrs. Caulfeild-Stoker is the daughter of a wealthy Chinese gentleman, who owns a large sugar agency in Mincing Lane, and who made a very handsome settlement on the couple.

Mr. Caulfeild-Stoker was formerly in the Consular Service, and on his marriage was made a director of his father-in-law's business. In May, 1912, a son was born in this country. At the time the husband was in poor health.

NEGLECTED HER

The petitioner complained that he never took her into society, and had not introduced her to his family, although he was taking advantage of her father's generosity. Her father bought them a beautiful house, so that she could take her proper position in society. Still the husband neglected her, and after he obtained a commission in the A.S.C. in 1915, he had not lived with her, and had only visited her on a few occasions for a few hours at a time.

When she was going to stay at the Ritz Hotel in his absence he wrote her a letter (which Sir E. Marshall Hall described as more like a newspaper article than a husband's letter to his wife), as it was mainly about the war.

In that letter he objected to her going to see him at Devonport, where he was then stationed. When she remonstrated with him about his treatment of her he did not seek to justify his neglect.

When he visited her once in November, 1916, he left early, and later in the evening his wife saw him at a theater with some ladies, all being in evening dress. Subsequently he wrote to her stating where proof of his misconduct could be obtained.

Evidence was given of his having stayed with a woman at an hotel, and the decree was granted, as stated above.

Yale Again On Army Football Schedules After 8-Year Lapse

Arrangements have been completed whereby the Army football team will play Yale at New Haven on October 22 next and the speedy Notre Dame eleven on November 5. It is likely this latter game may be played at the Polo Grounds. The Army will have one of the hardest schedules it has had in years next fall.

The Army has not played Yale since 1912, when the Blue was victorious by a score of 6 to 0. Previous to that time this struggle was one of the features of Eastern football. Twenty games were played in all from 1893 to 1912, inclusive. Of this number the Army won only three contests and tied five.

AUSTRALIAN PAIR DEFEAT WINNERS OF DAVIS CUP; TENNIS MEN TO VISIT JAPAN

Brookes And O'Hara Wood Beat Tilden And Johnston In Straight Sets; Tokio Preparing To Welcome American Racket Stars

(Reuter's Service)

Melbourne, January 13.—A tennis test match between teams representing Australia and the United States played here yesterday gave the following results:

Singles: Tilden (U.S.A.) beat Hawkes, 6-3; 6-3; Washburn (U.S.A.) beat Patterson, 7-5; 6-3.

Doubles: Brookes and O'Hara Wood (Australia) beat Tilden and Johnston (U.S.A.), 6-4; 7-5; 6-3.

Hardy, the American captain, declared that the doubles match just played was the greatest game ever played in the world.

Tilden, who, together with Johnston won the Davis Cup for the United States, said that he was most grateful that they had not had to meet O'Hara Wood and Brookes in the Davis Cup Competition.

William T. Tilden

Two of America's best tennis players, one of them a member of the American team which has just wrested the Davis Cup from the Australian defenders will probably be seen in action on Tokio courts this spring. Samuel Hardy, captain of the Davis Cup team, and R. Lindley Murray are expected to reach Japan from Australia late in March, according to word received by officials of the Tokio Lawn Tennis Club.

HAVE ENVIABLE RECORDS

Murray has been one of America's leading players for the last six years. During that time he has seldom failed to rank among the first ten of American stars and more than once has ranked as high as third. Hardy, while not considered an active member of the Davis Cup team, went to Auckland as captain, being in charge of the active players, who were William T. Tilden, William M. Johnston and Watson M. Washburn. Murray, accompanied the team to Auckland. The visit of these two players to Tokio is expected to arouse great interest among the followers of the game there.

Work on the Tokio Lawn Tennis Club's grounds, adjacent to the Tokio Club, has progressed so far that it is possible to play there now, although the complete work, including a pavilion for both men and women members of the organisation, has hardly been begun.

The new pavilion, if built according to plans now being considered by the construction committee, will contain locker rooms, shower baths, a tea room and a lounge room. Mr. T. Tanaka acting secretary of the organisation and Mr. H. F. Oltmans, member of the construction committee, have been assured by the contractor to whom the work will probably be awarded that it will be possible to complete the pavilion before the two tennis stars arrive for their Tokio visit.

TO MEET TOKIO PLAYERS

Several of Tokio's leading tennis players will play against the two visiting players. Numerous matches will be played at the Tokio Club's courts and exhibitions will very probably be given at the leading Japanese universities.

"It will be a most important event to Japanese athletes," one of the members of the Tokio Tennis Club writes "as tennis ranks right along with baseball with the young Japanese athletes. Numerous social events have already been planned for the visiting stars, and their time will be well filled up while they are in the city."

FOREIGN DUMPING HURTS THE SWISS

Merchants Complain Of Vast Surplus War Stocks Sold In The Country

TALK OF PROHIBITIVE DUTY

Suggestion That The Dumping Countries Are Injuring Their Ordinary Trade

BY JULIAN GRANDE
(New York Times)

Geneva, Nov. 20.—The high value of the Swiss franc in all countries is far more of a curse than a blessing to Switzerland, as the Swiss have been finding out for some time past. Not only are foreign holders of Swiss stocks and shares selling out in order to realise many more francs than they paid, but every nation at present which has surplus army and navy stores is doing its best to dump them into Switzerland. These include not only clothing and boots, but machine tools, motor cars, motor trucks, carts and vans.

It is perhaps not entirely, but certainly very largely, due to this dumping of superfluous army stores that nearly seven times as many motor cars were imported into Switzerland in the first quarter of 1920 as in the corresponding period of 1913. It is true that motor cars are more in demand now than they were seven years ago. For one reason, owing to the dearness of railway transport, many business houses find motor cars an advantage, if not a necessity; for another, in Switzerland, as elsewhere, there are many new rich and war profiteers who in 1913 could not have dreamed of buying motor cars, but who now are rushing about in them everywhere.

Certain shop windows in Geneva, and more or less in every Swiss town, now show nothing but American army and navy goods—mackintoshes, socks and stockings, boots, puttees, shaving and other soap, razors, tents, blankets, cloth by the meter, uniforms of all kinds, caps, motor equipment, tools of many sorts. The British Army Disposal Board has many advertisements in the Swiss newspapers offering surplus army stocks, including carts and motor trucks; the Italians, Germans and even Austrians are also offering or have been offering their surplus war goods, at which Swiss mercantile men look very much askance.

Every one will at once exclaim that Germany, Austria and probably Italy and France could quite well sell these goods in their own countries. No doubt they could, but speculators, and perhaps the Governments also are tempted by the very high value of Swiss money. A French article which in Switzerland fetches twenty francs brings about fifty francs to the French seller; an Italian article which fetches the Italian seller thirty francs here yields him 100 lira in Italy, and as for German stock, if a German product be sold here, even now, for twelve francs, that means 100 marks to the German seller. Most of the American goods now being dumped into Switzerland are stores which come by way of France. To sell these in France, with the low French exchange, would not pay, but to sell them in Switzerland, even though the dollar be a good deal above par there, nevertheless results in a profit.

The consequences of the sale of army uniforms in Switzerland are very noticeable. Not only are many hotel porters and messengers, factory workers and laborers generally dressed wholly or partly in America khaki suits and wearing American army shirts, boots and even overcoats, but bank clerks sometimes may be seen wearing American army officers' uniforms. No wonder one of the miners' delegates to the recent international congress in Geneva remarked that he saw more signs of militarism in a day there than in a month in England.

Swiss manufacturers in many branches of industry have been injured by this persistent dumping of old army stocks, so much so that the Chambers of Commerce have actually issued circulars calling attention to the alleged bad quality of some of these army goods and warning the public not to buy them. It is now even urged that the Government should intervene and put prohibitive duties upon all old army and navy goods of all powers. The difficulty would be to distinguish between these army stores and goods being imported in the ordinary way, which it is, of course not desired to keep out.

Inquiries made from various business houses in Switzerland prove that this dumping of goods is not benefiting ordinary trade, because many of the goods are really of inferior quality, and this gives a bad name to the products of the country of whose old army stores they formed part. During the last few months the trade which began between Switzerland and such centers as Manchester, Birmingham and Sheffield has not improved as it should have done, undoubtedly partly because of these army stores which have been flooding the Swiss market, and which people did not find wholly satisfactory.

It is noteworthy that the shops selling these army goods are generally not the well known, established houses, but those of speculative firms which deal in little or nothing else and very often are not even managed by Swiss. It is urged by Swiss manufacturers that most of these goods, if not all, can be made in Switzerland, and that, although in many branches of industry unemployment does not yet prevail, there is too much reason to fear that it will do so next Autumn and Winter. Nothing should be done, therefore, it is urged, to lessen the chances of employment in Switzerland.

Engine tools, for instance, were imported in the first quarter of 1920 in quantities almost seven times as great as in the first quarter of 1919. Moreover, there is every ground for believing that large stores of surplus American army goods are still lying in France to be dumped into Switzerland at the first opportunity. No one can blame the different Governments for trying to dispose of superfluous army stocks to the best possible advantage, but whether by so doing they will ultimately benefit their countries' trade is very doubtful.

Germany Shocked By Money Situation

Banker Tells Reichstag Country Is Heading Toward Austrian-Russian Conditions

BY GEORGE RENWICK

Berlin, Dec. 3.—After experiencing a shock regarding the serious food situation, Germany has had a "Jack Johnson" fired at her by Herr Havenstein, President of the Reichsbank and one of the highest financial authorities in the land. Only comparatively short reports of his speech, made before the Finance Committee of the Reichstag, appeared in the press, but it is learned that his straight talk to the committee was much more sensational and pessimistic than such reports represented it to be. His gloomy outlook may be summed up in one of his sentences, to the effect that if Germany "proceeds on her present financial path she will reach the Austrian or Russian conditions in two years."

The circumstances which led to Havenstein's appearance before the committee shed an additional lurid light on the palsied financial policy of the Government. A year ago a measure was passed called the National Emergency Sacrifice. It was really a sort of income tax, payable over a period of from thirty to fifty years. After it had been a year in force, it was found that it was bringing in only 1,000,000 marks for every billion expected, so the Government introduced a measure to hasten payment, and that is now before the Finance Committee.

The "unholy alliance" of Democrats and Junkers, however, is intent on weakening considerably the effect that this new measure would have. It would be thought that a measure which was bringing in only one-thousandth part of what was expected could stand speeding up, but even Dr. Dernburg, who calls himself a Democrat, declares that the committee must "draw the poisoned teeth" in the face of such opposition.

Dr. Wirth, Finance Minister, called Havenstein to his aid and the Reichsbank President spoke plainly to the committee. He painted a black picture because "he could paint no others and recommended speeding up of the emergency sacrifice measure in conjunction with a big compulsory loan. Those two things he declared, would bring in 35,000,000,000 marks, and that would hold up, the increase of the floating debt—already 148,000,000 marks and likely to be increased by another 30,000,000 by the end of the year—check printing of new notes and stabilise values.

The Government considered this proposal, but the People's Party Ministers, reflecting also the Democratic and Conservative vested interests, secured its rejection. Herr Wirth as good as gave the committee until Tuesday to make up their minds on the matter, so it is not improbable that Germany may on that day find herself faced with a Cabinet crisis brought about by the resignation of Herr Wirth.

Leading articles in the press today skate skillfully around the subject, and banking circles are split into two camps. Meanwhile the German Ambassadors to three great Entente Powers, Dr. Sthamer, in London; Dr. Mayer, in Paris, and von Berenberg Gossler, in Rome, have arrived in Berlin and I learn that they will take part in highly important Government conferences, the main subject of which will be finance.

How Richard Hazelton Was Shot Is Told By Witnesses

Quinn, to another table and ordered drinks for them. We will show that drinks were ordered and that Mr. Hazelton asked for the chit and sent it over to his table so he could pay it when he paid his bill. About that time Mr. Hazelton induced the accused to go home and started to go to the cloak room with him. They went to the cloak room, Furbush the accused in the lead, Mr. Hazelton, the deceased, just behind him and Quinn bringing up to the rear.

When they arrived in the cloak room Mr. Hazelton being in there with him, Furbush without any warning wheeled around (Mr. Hazlton having hold of him by one arm) and placed the pistol at Hazelton's stomach and fired. Mr. Hazelton fell to the floor and was afterward taken into the larger room and later put in his open car and taken to the hospital where he died about five days later.

The accused after firing the shot also pointed his pistol at two other men before making his escape. He then after pointing it at one man in the cloak room went to the bottom of the stairs, pointed it at another man and went down the street 1,000 or 1,500 feet where he was apprehended by a marine and a sailor who had been told of the trouble and who went in search for him. He was then conducted to the police station without hat or coat, and from there he was brought to the U. S. Jail and incarcerated.

MR. HEEN'S REPLY

In reply to the statement of the prosecution Mr. Heen, attorney for defendant, said: The line of defense in this case to be followed on behalf of the prisoner is one which if substantiated and proved will completely absolve the prisoner of all responsibility on this charge and that line of defense is temporary insanity.

Now, we do not know just exactly how much proof the Government has against the prisoner which may tend to show that he was the man who did the actual shooting. We do not know that the prosecution has ever found the pistol. All we know is the testimony of three Chinese witnesses who testified at the preliminary examination and although it might be argued later that their testimony would be deemed unreliable and impeached on certain points yet in spite of all that we wish to make an important disclosure at the present time and the disclosure is this that the prisoner did have a pistol when he came ashore.

It is a peculiar concesson to make, if the Court pleases, but that is simply an indication that we intend to be fair in this case and that there should be no deception as to the facts of the case.

SCENE IN COURT

A large diagram, showing the location of the tables, stove, etc. in the El Dorado dance hall and the cloak room, hat racks, stairs, etc. was produced in the court room. Also various photographs were put in evidence.

Dr. Walter G. Hiltner testified that he was called to the Shanghai General Hospital on the night of Dec. 13 and performed an operation on Hazelton, and that Hazelton afterwards died of peritonitus as the result of the bullet wound which he had received.

Dr. Thomas P. Dunn, corroborated Dr. Hiltner, as to the location of the wound, etc.

Francis P. Quinn, the man who accompanied Furbush to the El Dorado testified that they left the ship together and that Furbush had a pistol with him, that they went to several cafes, and were directed to the El Dorado as a place where they could get a little music and that they had been drinking different things, but that Furbush drank only gin rickies. He said that after the second drink at the El Dorado he did not remember anything until he woke up in the police station the next morning. He testified that in conversation he had with Furbush afterward Furbush said if he could only see the gun he might be able to tell something about it and that Furbush also stated that he thought he was doped at the time.

Testimony was given by the next witness concerning the events that led up to the shooting.

Q—Tell the Court what happened from the time you first saw Mr. Hazelton there, making use of the diagram, Exhibit A to indicate places.

A—I was seated at the corner of Table B drinking peppermint and soda. Suddenly without any invitation two men dragged their chairs from their table over to my table. The last witness, Quinn, coming to my right and the accused on Quinn's right. Their attitude was anything but gentlemanly. Their attitude indicated that they did not come to the table to be sociable. As courteously as I could I asked them if they would not kindly return to their own table. Quinn replied "No, we are going to stay here." They seated themselves and without any reason at all Quinn and the accused grabbed my hands and held them on top of the table saying "Right hands on table." I protested and suggested that I was not seeking any trouble and wouldn't they please be gentlemen. I happened to glance that way and noticed the stock of an automatic revolver in the accused's pocket. I am under the impression that the revolver was in the vest pocket. I noticed this revolver handle and repeated that I was not looking for trouble and asked them to be gentlemen, and "furthermore you have a revolver in your pocket." The word I used was I think "gun." "You have a gun in your pocket." He said "Yes, and I know how to use it."

By the Court.

Q. Who said?

A. The accused.

All this time the hands were being bounced up and down on the table. I said "I do not doubt that at all," but tried to impress on the two of them that I had no desire to get into any argument or trouble and was trying to do everything I could to be patient thinking that they would desist.

The accused grabbed my index and second finger of my right hand and bent them back until it was very painful.

"WANT TO HURT YOU"

I said "Gee, man you are hurting my fingers," and he said "I want to hurt you," and uttered an oath. Quinn or some one moved his chair back and in trying to pull myself away from the accused's grip on my fingers I must have pulled him toward me because my chair upset and I fell over against the frame work around the stove that caused the stove to be likewise moved so that the stove pipe fell down.

The stove pipe fell on my hand and the accused was on top of me. Naturally I endeavored to extricate myself. By that time a number of people had run over and pulled the accused off me and likewise assisted me to my feet. Among the crowd who ran over was Richard Hazelton, the deceased.

Some one in the crowd called out "We are all Americans, aren't we," and apparently tried to quiet the accused. I said "Look out, he has a gun," and apparently everything was quiet after that and I moved over to another table. Hazelton and the accused and Quinn seated themselves and they seemed to be quiet, no trouble. A dance intervened and the next thing that I remember was a shot fired. I heard the sound of a shot in the cloak room.

There were people running in all directions and women screaming and I sat perfectly still at my table. A number of people rushed up to the door. The door was open, they sort of stepped back and forward again and then the crowd that was at the doorway rushed out to the cloak room. Later Hazelton was pulled into the main hall right in front of the door way. That is all.

Witness said that Furbush and Quinn, when they came to his table first, were apparently under the influence of liquor.

Q—You have stated that Furbush and Quinn were in a state of intoxication. In what state of intoxication were they?

A—That is difficult to say. There are many degrees.

Q—Will you state whether or not the accused could articulate clearly at that time?

A—He certainly could

Q—Did you notice whether or not he had any difficulty in maintaining his equilibrium?

A—I didn't notice any.

On cross-examination he testified that he had not noticed the accused and Quinn when he went into the El Dorado, that he had had only two drinks and that his mind was perfectly clear.

OTHER WITNESSES

James Barry, policeman, attached to the North Szechuen Road Station, testified that he was sent to arrest a man who had shot another in the El Dorado and found the accused, Furbush, in the custody of two Navy men at the Chapei Police Station and took him to the North Szechuen Road police station, that Furbush became very much frightened and had had some drink but did not think he was totally under the influence of drink.

R. W. Ward, Shanghai Municipal Police constable, testified that he was in the charge room of the North Szechuen Road police station on the night of Dec. 13, when Furbush was brought in in response to a call of the proprietor of the El Dorado to send some one to arrest a man who had shot another. The prisoner seemed to be dazed and had a slight abrasion just over his right eye.

Sophie Vaserman, a Russian girl employed at the El Dorado Cafe, testified that she had been sitting at the table with two Americans and saw the trouble during which the stove was knocked over, and that she saw the revolver in Furbush's pocket before the shooting. She spoke to another girl, Miss Fanny, about it.

Fannie Gerzman, Russian Jewess, employed at the El Dorado, testified that she was sitting at a table with Mr. Hazelton and his friend and saw the accused on the night of the shooting with Quinn at a table near the stove and saw the disturbance when the stove was knocked over. Miss Sophie told her she saw a revolver on Furbush and that she told the proprietor.

A Obodovsky, proprietor of the El Dorado Cafe testified that he knew Mr. Hazelton, that when he heard the trouble he came out of his office and ordered the boys to take the stove away and when everything quieted down he went back to his office and after the shooting he went to the police station and reported the shooting.

Another witness then testified that he arrived at the El Dorado soon after 11 with two friends and saw Furbush and Quinn sitting with a man whom he recognised and Furbush grabbed one of the men by the hand and in the scuffle the man was knocked off his balance, and fell backward against the stove. Everybody in the room stood up and the majority flocked around the table.

"Just then I heard Quinn say "Look out he has got a gun in his pocket" and also at that time one of the men turned around spoke to me saying "I was just trying to be nice and friendly."

At that moment Hazelton interfered. Hazelton was outside the crowd. He had been sitting over the other side of the room and he pushed his way through the crowd and spoke to Furbush. The words he said to Furbush were: "Come on old chap, we don't want any trouble here." His manner was very civil and he tried to persuade Furbush to sit down at the table. He eventually was seated. They sat down and everything was quite orderly.

A minute later the orchestra started up again and I commenced to dance. Almost everybody in the room danced except Hazelton, Quinn and Furbush. Hazelton called for a drink. I do not know what they had. When the dance was finished everybody sat down and a few minutes after that Hazelton, Quinn and Furbush arose from the table and I turned around to look at them and saw Furbush, his hand around to his hip pocket, hesitate and drop his hand into his right hand pocket as he was getting up from his seat. Knowing he had a gun in his pocket I said half to myself or to nobody in particular "He has a gun in his pocket," naturally thinking he had it in his hip pocket. They walked across the dance hall and out into the cloak room.

Q—Was the door closed when they went into the cloak room?

A—They disappeared into the cloak room and the door closed on them. Everybody looked relieved that that was the end of the trouble but a minute after that a report which I took to be the firing of a revolver was heard in the dance hall.

About thirty seconds later the door opened and his red-haired companion, Quinn, came staggering in the door with his hand to his forehead and leaning up against the door. I thought that it was Quinn who was shot and went across the floor to his assistance. When I got alongside of Quinn before I spoke to him or touched him I heard the cry of "Help," and recognising Hazelton's voice I went to the door and threw it open.

Q—What did you see there then?

A—When I opened the door I came face to face with Furbush with a revolver still in his hand, Hazelton lying on the floor, with his head toward the door of the dance hall.

Q—What did you do?

A—I stood there for about 20 seconds and instinctively pulled the door toward me naturally to cover my own body.

Q—You are positive that you saw Furbush, the accused, standing over Hazelton with a revelver?

A—I am. Furbush was standing over Hazelton's body and had the revolver pointing at me, and I will say this, that Furbush looked a bit dazed and the reason I stood and stared at him was because he looked as if he didn't know what he had done. He stood there with the revolver pointing at me as if in a trance.

Q—What did you do after you closed the door?

A—It was not until then that I noticed that everybody in the hall was crowded behind me.

Q—While you were in that cloak room and had the door open did Hazelton say anything?

A—Hazelton never said a word. The cry of help was before I opened the door. In a few seconds I opened the door again and saw Furbush disappear down the stairs. The people in the dance hall crowded around, several came out, and Hazelton was taken into the dance hall and afterwards taken to the hospital in his car.

Henry Sommers, officer on a steamboat, testified that he followed the accused down the stairs, saw him hide in the doorway where he pointed a revolver at the witness who ran back into the entry and had the watchman close the door.

Charlie Lewis Stanton, a cockswain on a U.S. boat, testified that he was at the El Dorado with some friends and saw the trouble which resulted in the stove being knocked over, and that he had rendered first aid to Hazelton after the shooting.

L. M. Guedes, testified that he was sitting at the table with Hazelton and after the shooting took him to the hospital in his car, along with Quinn, that Hazelton had told him to keep an eye on Quinn as he was a witness to the fact that the man with the mustache had shot Hazelton.

Francisco Carneiro and J. B. White testified that they also had been sitting at the table with Hazelton and that a girl had come over and said Furbush had a gun.

Zung Ching-foh, one of the cloak room boys, testified that Hazelton and Furbush came out of the cloak room together, Hazelton holding Furbush by the arms and that Furbush wrenched himself away, drew the pistol from his left hand vest pocket, fired at Hazelton and then ran down the stairs.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in ivilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

SPANISH LABOR MEN STILL DIVIDED

Syndicalists Did Not Help Socialists In Campaign For Parliament

New York, December 12.—When it was reported last September that the Socialist and Syndicalist forces of Spain had issued a joint manifesto protesting against the so-called high-handed actions of the Spanish Government in trying to suppress the apparently endless labor troubles it was taken for granted in some political circles that this rapprochement would probably result in the lining up of the Syndicalists with the Socialist Party in the campaign for the Cortes which ends with the general elections today. Since that time there have been scattered cablegrams indicating that the proposed union was not likely to be effected and that the manifesto was only a flash in the pan.

This view is confirmed by a statement made by Salvatore Segni (or Salvador Segur), the Barcelona leador of the Syndicalists, who, according to a Madrid cable dispatch, was deported to the Balearic Islands on November 29, printed in the Frankfurter Zeitung of November 7. There was no possibility of the semi-anarchist Spanish Syndicalists being induced to support the moderate Socialist party in its political campaign, according to Senor Segni, who insists that, far from wanting to revive monarchism and parliamentarism through aiding the Socialists or any other political actionists, the Syndicalists are anxious to see the end of such action so that they can put through their program of overthrowing the Government by direct action.

Senor Segni admits that some of the sections of the Spanish General Confederation of Labor, which is under Socialist control, are really revolutionary, and he goes on to emphasise the necessity of freeing such sections from "foreign influences," such as those of the Socialist leaders. In closing his statement, the Syndicalist leader says:

"In order to induce us to take part in the electoral campaign, persons have reminded us that the Russian communists, who are running the Soviet regime, voted in the elections before their victory. Now, we are not Russian communists. They appeal to us very much and we feel ourselves to be their allies, but conditions in this country are different than those in the realm of the former Tsar and we don't consider it the proper thing slavishly to imitate the Russian model. The Spanish revolution will have to come about differently than in Russia. We believe that no political party, no matter how good its intentions may be, should be allowed to exercise the power but that it must rest exclusively in the co-operative associations which in the last analysis have the responsibility for the production and distribution of goods. And then the dictatorship, if it is unavoidable for the transition from the capitalist to the communist regime, should only be exercised by the co-operatives.

"Of course this will not be effected without some friction, but we can count upon a satisfactory final result, because it is easier to reach an agreement on questions of production, administration, etc., than on theoretical policies. First of all, the physical welfare of humanity must be looked after. But this by no means signifies that we want to do away with the interests of pure reason, of art, of science, or of philosophy. These too, must have their place in the sun. Yes, we are communists, but our view is somewhat different than that of the Russian comrades. They follow Marx; we believe that Bakunin was right."

In a report on the activities of the Council of Propaganda and Action of the Revolutionary Peoples of the Orient, which is made up of forty-five members chosen at the Bolshevist Congress held in Baku last September, credited to the Moscow Pravda of November 8 by the German press, it is pointed out that M. Pavlof and Mme. Stassova, the representatives of the Russian Communist Party on the Executive Committee of nine recently elected by the council, have the power of absolute veto over all the acts of the committee or council. The council has established a special branch in Turkestan, presided over by M. Szokolnikof, and is about to send a delegation, composed of representatives of the communist parties of Russia, Azerbaidjan and Turkey, to Bokhara to support the revolutionary movement there. It is asserted that the council keeps in close touch with the Orient through its delegates and will soon publish newspapers in Russian, Turkish, Arabic and Persian for general circulation, as well as found a propaganda school.

According to a report from Bucharest appearing in the Vienna Arbeiter-Zeitung of November 13, the Government, headed by General Averescu, used extremely drastic methods in suppressing the general strike called in Rumania by the Socialist and labor organisations on October 21. The declaration of a state of siege and the mobilisation of the railroad workers, briefly reported in cable dispatches, was accompanied, says the Arbeiter-Zeitung report, by wholesale arrests of labor leaders, including nearly all the Socialist members of the Chamber of Deputies. At Jassy Octav Banella, one of the best known Rumanian painters, was among those arrested, and his painting called "Peace" was taken from the Socialist headquarters and torn to pieces by the soldiers. More than 1,000 of the arrested persons were said to be still in jail when the report was written. The strike, which was called in order to try to force the Rumanian Government to restore political and industrial rights to the workers, was effective for only a few days and then was completely broken by the power of the authorities.

Representatives of some 250,000 trade unionists met in Budapest on October 31 in the first labor convention held in Hungary since the overthrow of the Bela Kun regime in the Summer of 1919, says a report found in Vienna newspapers. Because of the repressive measures adopted by the Horthy Government, about all the union delegates were able to do was to pass resolutions asking for the supplying of the consumers' co-operatives with food, fuel and clothing, the furnishing of employment on public works to the ever-increasing number of jobless men, control over raw materials, reduction in the cost of living and the guaranteeing of personal liberty and security. It was pointed out by the delegates that the economic condition of the Hungarian workers was worse than ever before and that thousands of them were facing starvation, without any action being taken by the Government to relieve the situation.

Increased popularity of the study of the German language in Japan is attested to by Dr. Dahlmann, Professor of German at the University of Tokio, in a letter printed by the Kolnische Volkszeitung. In 1920 there were 2,720 students taking German, against 2,480 in 1919, and in the State Commercial College in Tokio there were as many students taking German as there were of all the other foreign languages together. The medical faculty of the university has made German one of its requirements, as has the law faculty.

The Left Wing Socialist Party of Denmark recently held a joint convention with the delegates of forty-three labor unions at which it was decided to accept the twenty-one conditions for affiliation laid down by the Third (Communist) Internationale and to adopt the name Communist Party of Denmark, says a report from Copenhagen found in the Berner Tagwacht of November 16.

Science Vs. War

(From the Baltimore American)

If reports may be accepted at their face value, our scientists will presently have made war impracticable through the invention and manufacture of poisonous gases and high explosives that would absolutely overwhelm any army and destroy any city.

It would be a curious reflection upon the inability of ethical counsels to raise the world above the barbarisms of war if, in default of any serviceable association of the peoples the scientists should cause war to become a thing of the past by their inventions of new potencies for chemical agencies in warfare.

Hankow Market

The British Chamber of Commerce of Hankow write as follows in their weekly circular dated Hankow, January 5.

FINANCE AND MONEY MARKET

Business during the week was on a small scale, practically no bills offering and little or no demand for remittance. Some banks were keen sellers at 2d. over quotations to the end of 1921. Taels T.T. on Shanghai, Chinese market, on the 30th inst. were quoted at 97.3875, and today are quoted at 97.25. Dollars, after being 69.2—69.4 at the beginning of the week dropped and are quoted today at 69.075—69.275 buyers and sellers respectively. Native interest dropped from 14 percent to 6½ percent.

IMPORTS

Piece Goods.—The market remains stagnant, although there have been some enquiries for Whites and Venetians from stock.

Yarn.—There was quite an active demand for yarn for shipment after China New Year, and a fair amount of business was done.

EXPORTS

Chinese merchants are reported to have bought some tallow and wood oil. Local stocks of cow hides and goatskins are now very small and arrivals are limited at present.

Hongkong Share Market

Messrs. Maxon and Taylor write as follows in their weekly share report dated Hongkong, January 7.

There has been rather more business doing during the week with a rising tendency in most sections.

Rubbers. As we go to press our London agents wire us that the market has, in their opinion, definitely turned for the better, and they quote the commodity at ½d.

In Shanghai the market remains quiet with nothing doing.

The chief alterations from last week are:

Hongkong Banks.—Are steady at $775.

Canton Insurances.—Are wanted at $370.

Union Insurances.—Could probably be placed at $212.

Wharves.—Are firm at $93.

Hongkong Docks.—Are in good demand at $163½.

Deferred Indos.—London Register shares are quoted at £32, and Hongkong Register shares are wanted at $185.

China Sugars.—Have had a sensational rise during the last few days and close with buyers at $237½ for cash and $245 for March.

Douglases.—Are steady at $62½.

Steamboats.—Close with buyers at $24¼.

Hongkong Trams.—Are firm at $7¼.

Hongkong Electrics.—Have buyers at $18½, at which price shares have changed hands.

Powells.—Are in demand at $20.

Cotton

Messrs. J. Spunt and Company write as follows in their cotton market report dated today.

China Cotton.—Our market during the past week under review may be recorded as having been quiet and though very little business was effected prices, notwithstanding the paucity of trade demand, continued unchanged culminating, however, in a certain firmness at the close which was generated more by influence of the upward trend in Mid-Americans, the steadiness in the Yarn Markets and the small stocks of the staple locally, than any other factors.

While it is difficult to predict with any certainty the immediate future trend of the market, yet it is permissible, viewing past and present conditions, to forsee no very sharp upward or downward fluctuations before the advent of the Chinese New Year holidays. Tone of the Market Steady.

Second In Water Power

Canada Has 274 Horsepower Per Tousand Population

In the bulletin of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario attention is called to researches made by the Dominion Water Power Branch, Department of the Interior, and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Department of Trade and Commerce, concerning the development of water power in Canada. A mass of figures and detailed data has been gone through by both departments, and as a result of their recently completed survey figures reflecting the conditions at the beginning of 1920 are now available.

"According to a recent computation," says the bulletin, "the water power resources of the British Empire have been placed at from fifty to seventy million horsepower. This does not include such territories formerly under the control of the Central Powers as will fall in future under British influence. To this total Canada contributes in the neighborhood of twenty million horsepower. This figure represents the power available at sites at which more or less definite information is to hand. Continued investigation will undoubtedly add to this figure.

"According to the statistics just completed there is installed throughout the Dominion some 2,418,000 turbine or waterwheel horsepower of which 2,215,000 horsepower is actually and regularly employed in useful work. The larger figure includes the total installed capacity at full gate, including reserve units. It does not, however, include hydraulic exciter units. A large number of the plants now operating are designed for the addition of further units as the market demands. The ultimate capacity of such plants, together with that of new plants now under construction, totals some 3,385,000 horsepower.

"The total installed waterwheel and turbine horsepower in hydro central electric stations is 1,756,791 horsepower. Fuel auxiliaries installed as stand-bys to these hydro stations bring the total installed primary capacity up to 1,873,989 horsepower connected to 1,449,180 Kvadynamo capacity. The total capital invested in these central stations, inclusive of transmission and distribution systems, is $369,464,961, or an average of $210 per installed primary horsepower.

"The figures of seventy representative hydro-electric stations throughout the Dominion with an aggregate turbine installation of 745,797 horsepower show a total construction cost of $50,740,468 (pre-war figures) or an average of $69.11 per installed horsepower. This cost includes the capital invested in construction of dams, flumes, penstocks, and all hydraulic works, and of power stations and equipment. It includes real estate and transmission and distribution equipment. The figure in brief represents the capital cost of construction at the power site.

"With a water power development of 274 horsepower per thousand of population, Canada stands well in the forefront in respect to availability and utilisation of hydro-electric power resources, being surpassed in this respect only by Norway. The enormous water power reserves still untouched form a substantial basis for the progressive development and exploitation of other natural resources, and if properly co-ordinated with the development and utilisation of the enormous fuel resources of the Dominion, are an assurance of continued industrial expansion and prosperity."

"The Anglo-Japanese Alliance, And The Fate Of Japan"

PUTNAM Weale has written for The Peking Leader, under the above caption, a summary of the political and economical situation in the Far East which is not only significant, as revealing what is running in most well-informed minds in the East, but is notable for its clarity and timeliness.

We especially wish to direct the attention of Chinese statesmen to its contents. In case of war between the United States and Japan what position would they take? Would they remain at war with each other?—for that is what the present hideous impasse amounts to. The Chinese people North and South are not at war against one another. Only the so-called statesmen are at war, and their war is not so much one against the other as it is against the Chinese people.

On every side the more or less hidden hand of Japan is at work among these "bought and paid for" traitors who refuse to make peace in China. Why do they refuse to make peace when it is to the plain interest of their country to do so? Let them answer if they can. Until they do so they must stand convicted of obeying the will of Japan.

Ordinarily and at first glance one would say that a war between the United States and Japan would be the best thing that could happen for China. It certainly would be but for one thing. Would the Chinese leaders continue to do the will of Japan? But here is the Putnam Weale article:

BY PUTNAM WEALE

A good many people are anxious to know what is the precise position of Japan today, and what may be expected in the immediate future. Whilst any estimate must necessarily be speculative, what follows can be taken as a fair statistical survey and as adequate a summing-up as is possible in the present state of world confusion.

The Japanese position has been both strengthened and weakened by the war—strengthened because her great natural rival, Russia, having been temporarily laid in the dust she has no one to press on her in the Far East; weakened, because the real Japan, having emerged so clearly that every eye can appraise the true nature of her polity, her Government is now classed as reactionary and retrograde and public opinion is almost everywhere directed against her. It is with this peculiar background, darkened by large insurrectionary movements such as the Korean, that she must today be assessed.

The material facts are just as contradictory. The Japanese war profit, i.e., the money she made from swollen trading at high prices when her semi-belligerency only put upon her a meagre war outlay—is best understood by looking at the position of her gold reserve. At the present rate of exchange Japan has in gold no less than £300,000,000 sterling (300 million pounds sterling) or Yen 2,200,000,000 which is almost five times what she had in 1913. Next to the United States she has the largest stock of gold in the world, the European reserves having been vastly depleted by five years of war-payments to America. Of this amount of Yen 2,200 million the greater part is now safely housed in Japan. During 1919 and 1920 the Bank of Japan removed to Tokio a great deal of the gold held to account in America, the net import in these two years amounting to 700 million yen, or (at present exchange) nearly 100 millions sterling. Japan has still a large Gold Exchange Fund in London amounting to 60 millions sterling and she has also further credits remaining in America. But almost every incoming mail steamer carries bullion to the Bank of Japan, proving clearly that the Tokio Government is preparing against a possible storm. This vast treasure in gold allows the Government to contemplate large internal loans.

Meanwhile Japan's export trade has suffered a tremendous blow from the collapse of the silk trade with America, and also from general competition by foreign ships and factories. So much is this the case that the balance against her on last year's trading is 400 million yen—a new and exceptional position. Should this tendency continue during the present year it will tend to bring about one of two things, (a) a forced liquidation of the political position by warfare or (b) an open reversal of policy in China and on the Pacific by adhesion to disarmament proposals.

Why? Because economic pressure continued over long periods is inevitably decisive in one of these two ways.

In Japan's case the reasons are as follows: of her Budget of 1,500 million yen almost exactly one half is today devoted to armament. This budget, which is roughly 200 millions sterling is England's pre-war budget levied at a time when Britain's national trade was 1,400 millions sterling. But Japan is raising this sum by taxation when her commerce is not much more than 500 millions sterling and constantly tending to shrink. Experience has demonstrated that a budget amounting to more than ¼ of the annual national turnover in foreign commerce is dangerous and a sure precursor of violent political disturbance. In 1920 British revenue amounted to roughly £1,100 millions; the total trade to about £3,500 million; and just because the budgeting was excessive and largely exceeded the safe margin, England is now face to face with a far-reaching economic crisis demanding a retrenchment policy. It is Japan's strong gold position which masks the very real facts confronting her. But the danger will emerge before the year is half-spent and become the one absorbing problem.

It is the Japanese naval program and what it signifies internationally which is the immediate source of trouble. The so-called 'eight-eight standard,'—that is a battle fleet of eight super-dreadnaughts of 40,000 tons displacement, and a squadron of eight super-cruisers of almost equal gun-power and tonnage—has been designed to give the country maritime independence. Remembering the negative results in the North Sea contest in 1914-1918—when England with a preponderating fleet effected very little—there is no reason not to suppose that Japan, if she limits her naval activities to Far Eastern waters, should not be able to confront a far more powerful enemy. For behind the first-line battle-fleet, now being built, Japan has very numerous squadrons of indifferent fighting capacity but perfectly suited to the work in view. In the numbers of obsolescent vessels which she carefully retains on the active list, she has an admirable weapon to carry out what would be one of her immediate main objectives should armed conflict with America arise, i.e., an effective blockade of the Chinese coast so that no enemy could effect co-operation with China whilst the main channels of supply would be kept open for her to draw her raw materials without interruption. Well-protected by mechanical mines and operating outside the 3-mile limit, this large secondary fleet of Japanese vessels whilst nominally acting entirely within their rights according to international law, would in effect be so restricting China's freedom of action as to be interfering with her policy.

This is the prospect which looms up behind the naval program.

The fate of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, which will be decided in London in June by the Conference of British countries, must exert an immense influence over these coming events. It is not too much to declare that in the field of practical politics the Anglo-Japanese Alliance has still twice the importance of the League of Nations for it is the key to 'the fighting grouping' of the major powers. What the London Conference will decide is naturally unknown today, but if by the time the Conference meets the United States has given formal notification as some expect that she declines to enter the League until the Alliance is abrogated, then it will be in London that the future of the Pacific will be mapped. Japan's whole destiny depends upon a continuation of the Alliance in some shape or form, even if that form is modified to an Exchange of Notes. For although Japan knows that Britain will never draw the sword against America, she herself is not afraid to make the attempt if she can be certain that Britain will do three things: (a) hold the ring as in the Russian war of 1904-5; (b) be present at the Peace Treaty as a nominal Ally; (c) secure that China will not use the opportunity to attack all along the line and drive out her garrisons from Hankow, Shantung and Manchuria by retaining the right to invoke the Alliance against any third power.

This is the whole issue of the Far East in a nut-shell. Chinese statesmen should understand that there are no alternatives. The new situation demands not only that any new agreement or exchange of notes shall make no mention of China or Chinese territory without her prior consent, but that China must be guaranteed full liberty to protect herself against warlike operations on her territory by the specific understanding that whatever she may undertake within her own frontiers cannot involve a breach of neutrality; and that she will be justified and supported in a demand—(to be followed by the use of force if necessary)—for complete evacuation of her soil by belligerents should a state of war arise in the Far East.

Some Interesting Problems Of Science Solved; Why Declination Of Moon Changes So Rapidly

By GARRETT P. SERVISS
(Famous Astronomer and Writer on Subjects of Scientific Interest)

"I have studied nautical astronomy, navigation, can 'shoot' the sun, moon and stars, but in all my study I have not learned why the declination of the moon changes so rapidly. Any information you can give me will receive my heartiest appreciation."—"W. A. D."

The declination of the moon—that is, its distance north or south of the equator of the heavens—changes so rapidly because the moon is so swift-footed as compared with other bodies whose declination changes, such as the sun.

It is something like the case of two men mounting, or descending, the slope of a long hill, one travelling fast and the other slow. The vertical elevation of the fast-goer increases or decreases more rapidly than that of the slowgoer. The change of elevation corresponds to change of declination. The moon travels, on the average, about thirteen times as fast as the sun, each apparently making a circuit of the heavens at its own pace.

The sun takes a year for one complete circuit; the moon takes only a lunar month, and since their apparent paths are inclined at a similar (though not the same) angle to the plane of the equator, it is evident that the moon must increase or decrease its distance from the equator faster than the sun. But the difference in their rates of change of declination at corresponding dates varies owing to the continuing change in their relative positions in their circuits.

SEEING SOUND WAVES

"I have read that observers of the U. S. Army in France were able to see sound waves in the air caused by a cannon. Is this so?

"F. W., New York."

Yes, there are a number of reliable reports of such observations. Sound waves are composed of alternate condensations and refractions of the air through which they pass. These changes of density have an effect upon the temperature of the air, and if very energetic waves pass through air saturated with water vapor they may produce sudden, brief condensations of moisture, which will be visible as moving arcs in the atmosphere. The changes of density produced by a powerful sound wave may also cause deviations of light rays that may be detected by photographic means. Theoretically, sound waves are even capable of producing the optical phenomenon called mirage, which is due to differences of refraction in adjacent portions of the air.

WATER PRESSURE CURIOSITY

"When pouring concrete walls is there just as much pressure on the sides of a form for a one-foot wall as there would be on the sides of a form for a six-foot wall? Both walls being the same height. This seems like a simple question, but I am working on concrete construction, and the contractor, the engineer, and the man in charge all fail to see that it is height and not width that makes pressure on the sides of the form. You tell 'em—McD., Chicago."

There is no more puzzling paradox in the field of popular science than that contained in the physical law that "the pressure exerted by a liquid on any surface depends only upon the area of the surface and the depth and density of the liquid, and not at all upon the volume of the liquid."

People seeing a huge reservoir of water held back by a mighty masonry or concrete dam naturally suppose that the strength of the dam has to be proportioned to the superficial area and volume or total quantity of the lake of water behind it. But, in reality, it is only the depth of the water against the dam and the area of the vertical section of the dam that determines the amount of pressure sustained by the dam. Any other fluid distributes its pressure in the same way as water, the intensity of the pressure per unit of surface and of depth varying with the density of the fluid.

Water weighs about 62 or 63 pounds per cubic foot. A column of water one foot square and 100 feet high exerts at the bottom a pressure of about 6,300 pounds per square foot of surface. If the square column of water were changed to the form of a vertical plane one foot thick, 100 feet high and 1,000 or 10,000 feet long the bottom pressure outward at the ends would be the same as before—6,300 pounds per square foot, and the same pressure would be experienced at any point all along each side.

Then, if the plane of water were placed flat upon one side, the pressure against the retaining walls would sink from 6,300 to only 63 pounds per square foot, since now the height or depth would be only one foot, and the law tells us that it is not the superficial area of a body of water, but its depth alone that determines its pressure upon a given surface.

If all the oceans of the globe were spread out into a single body of water of a uniform depth of six inches, a child could withstand its outward pressure at any point of the circumference, while a minute fraction of that quantity of water piled up in a column one inch in diameter and reaching as high as the moon would exert an outward pressure at the bottom of more than 40,000,000 tons per square foot!

Compares American And British Railroad Costs

New York, Dec. 12.—The Bureau of Railway Economics has prepared a memorandum comparing operating results on British and American railroads, which shows that the average trainload in Great Britain for the six months to June 30, 1920, was 150 tons, while that for the United States for the same period was 710 tons. Operating and traffic, as well as geographical, conditions in the United States and England, it is explained, are so different that comparisons of train or car loading may be considered misleading, but it is pointed out that a direct comparison, designed to set out the differences in detail, must have some value, especially when all the factors in the comparison are taken into account.

The average freight train load in the United States in 1888 was 176 tons; in 1898, 226 tons; in 1908, 352 tons; in 1918, 628 tons, and in 1920, for six months, 710 tons. Every decade from the first has shown marked advance, with the curious coincidence that in 1888 the average trainload in this country was greater than the British average for 1920, while the American average for 1888 was almost the same as that for one or two of the individual companies that top the list in England today.

Quoting these figures, a bulletin of the Association of Railway Executives says: "An important statistical unit in the new English statistics is the average revenue, or receipts per ton per mile. The average gross receipts per ton-mile in England for the month of January, 1920, were 2.328 cents, and were increased to 3 cents in the month of June, 1920. This incerase was due to the higher level of freight rates made effective on Jan. 15, 1920. The average for the six months ended June was 2.866 cents. These averages are gross receipts, and include charges for collection and delivery. Excluding such charges, the average net receipts per ton mile were: First four weeks (to Jan. 31) 2.107 cents; second four weeks (February), 2.689 cents; month of June 2.708 cents; average for six months, 2.629 cents.

"The general increase in freight rates, effective Jan. 15, ranged from 25 to 60 percent, plus a flat rate addition per ton, making an average increase of 55 percent for the country as a whole. Later, on Sept. 1, 1920, these rates were canceled and an increase of 100 percent plus a flat rate addition per ton was made on the rates in effect previous to Jan. 14, 1920. This latter increase, of course, play no part in the average receipts per ton-mile for England discussed above.

"The average receipts per ton-mile for Class I railroads in the United States, which correspond to the British averages, exclusive of collection and delivery charges, were .972. cents for the six months to June 30, 1920.

"For the six months ended June 30, 1920, the Class I railroads in the United States carried 189,997,457,000 ton miles of revenue freight, earning $1,847,-217,911, with an average receipt per ton-mile of .972 cents. According to the new British statistics, the average receipts per ton mile for the six months ended June 20, 1920, was 2.629 cents.

"If the average receipts per ton-mile which have been collected by the British railways during this six months's period had been charged against the freight traffic carried by the Class I. railways in the United States, for the six months ended June 30, 1920, the latter would have earned $5,455,-327,118 instead of $1,847,911.

"In other words, British rates applied to American traffic would have cost the shippers of the United States $3,600,000,000 in six months, or $7,200,000,000 per year, virtually $20,000,000 per day.

BRITISH CARS SMALLER

"The 207,281,000,000 ton-miles, including non-revenue freight, hauled by the Class I railways in the United States for the six months ended June, 1920, were carried by an average train consisting of 36 cars averaging 20 tons each.

"If the railways in the United States had used British cars which have an average load of six tons, in moving the tonnage quoted above they would have moved trains consisting of 120 cars, or more than three times the number of cars per train.

"In view of the car shortage in the United States this necessity for more than three times the number of cars for a given amount of traffic would clearly have tied up our railway traffic in a congestion such as the United States never has experienced, even in its most congested periods.

"In hauling the 207,281,000,-000 ton-miles of freight during the six months' period, Class I railways in the United States operated 252,540,000 freight train-miles, i.e., in train loads of 710 tons. Applying the British trainload of 150 tons to the ton-mileage hauled in the United States, the railways in the United States would have been forced to operate 1,195,356,000 train-miles, or nearly five times as many train-miles as the number actually needed under American operating conditions.

"The estimated length of haul in the United States for the six months, was 316 miles. The average length of haul for the British railways for the same period was 57 miles. If the average haul of the British railways had been in effect in the United States, American freight would have been interchanged 5.54 times as often as it was. The consequent loss in efficiency, increase in cost, and delays in handling the freight business are almost incalculable.

"In other words, if railways in the United States had carried their freight at the rate per ton-mile charged by the British railways, they would have earned $3,600,-000,000 more.

"If they had been using British freight cars they would have been forced to use eighty-four more cars to the train, and the resulting car shortage would have tied them up."

Canal Defenses Inefficient?

(From the Chicago Tribune)

It should be humiliating and disquieting to the American people, as we believe it was to the President-elect, to learn that the defenses of the canal are in any respect short of the highest efficiency. That they are, as was pointed out to Mr. Harding on his trip of inspection through the zone, is a reproach primarily to the Administration and Congress, for it is the duty of our representatives in office to safeguard the nation and its interests even when public opinion is preoccupied or indifferent. No President and no war secretary, no member of the committees on military and naval affairs can escape blame for allowing such a condition as was disclosed to Mr. Harding to exist.

The situation is characteristic of the slackness, inconsistency and military inadequacy of the defense policy of the present Government, but unfortunately that is not all. No Government and no Congress would dare to let the nation's defense deteriorate if it were not confident of public indifference. The public will condemn violently when the mistake comes home and the price of its own indifference is to be paid. But meanwhile we drift. "Tired of War," as a congressman said in justification of his vote against an important military measure, we tell ourselves that everything is for the best and that there is no need of our troubling ourselves with unpleasant possibilities.

This is human nature, but human nature in a weak and foolish mood for which it is certain some day to be punished.

Cakes And Cookies

By LORETTO C. LYNCH

(An Acknowledged Expert in All Matters Pertaining to House-hold Management)

Who does not love the fun of preparing some old-time cookies and cakes in their very own kitchens? And I believe it is cheaper to make one's own cookies and cakes at home than to purchase first quality product at the shop.

The recipes which follow have been carefully tested and work well. Any woman who has had a little experience in cooking might, with safety, try making the whole batch. But the novice, the woman who does not cook often and tries these wintertime cakes rather as a pastime had better try one-eighth or one-fourth of the recipe first, so that in case of failure the loss of material will be slight.

Before measuring any dry ingredient it should be sifted. It is well to stone raisins, if they require it, before proceeding with the mixing of the materials. Baking pans or plates should be decided upon and greased, or not greased, as the case requires. In short, attend to as many preliminaries as you can think of before proceeding to really mix the material.

By a cup is meant the regulation half-pint measuring cup. These cost about ten cents, but be sure to purchase it in a reliable store, so you may be sure you have the measuring cup that the writer of the recipe intends.

Heap the cup and then cut the top level with a case knife. In the case of spoonfuls, the spoon should be heaped and then leveled with a case knife. Be sure you take level measurements. This is the first essential to success.

Cookies cut round with biscuit cutter or drinking glass are always acceptable, but if you invest in a few fancy cutters, the children will doubly appreciate your cookies. These come in the various nursery animal forms—dog, duck, sheep, bird—as well as star and oval forms. The cutters may be used for fancy sandwiches for afternoon teas and the like.

Recipes calling for butter may be changed to butterine, or lard, or any of the excellent vegetable fats on the market. In substituting a fat having no salt as butter has, a fourth of a teaspoon of salt for each cup of fat should be added. Half butter and half some other fat is better than no butter at all.

COOKIES

One cup butter, 2 cups sugar, 2 eggs, ½ or more cups milk, 4 cups flour, more or less, and 6 teaspoons baking powder.

Cream the butter and add the sugar to it and then the well-beaten eggs. If a full cup of milk is added, all four cups of flour sifted with 6 teaspoons of baking powder may be added. If less milk is used, the flour and baking powder quantity should be diminished accordingly.

Take a little of the dough upon the board at a time, handling as little as possible. Cut as desired after patting the dough into a thin sheet. Sprinkle some with sugar, others with chopped nuts, and others with shredded cocoanut.

The dough may be divided. Into some may be worked cocoa. Some may be flavored with vanilla extract or almond. Some may be tinted with color pastes. In this way many kinds of cookies may come out of the same bowl with very little labor extra.

Bake in a quick oven a few minutes. Avoid burning by close watching.

ENGLISH GINGER NUTS

One cup butter, 2 cups sugar, 2 eggs, 4 cups flour, 2 tablespoons white ginger and 1 cup finely-chopped orange peel.

Cream butter, add sugar and well-beaten eggs. Add the other ingredients. Shape into balls the size of marbles. Bake in a quick oven, but avoid burning.

To make a pretty cake bake any cake you know how to make. Cover with a white frosting. A simple one is made by beating the white of one egg until stiff and beating in enough powdered sugar to make the right consistency. Flavor with a few drops of lemon juice or vanilla extract. Use bits of candied cherry and citron.

A LITTLE ABOUT COAL

A colliery used to be called a coalery.

Gas light can be traced back over two hundred years. A Mr. T. Shirley, in 1669, attributed a burning well at Wigan to the presence of coal underneath it. Just about this time a Mr. Clayton procured gas by distilling coal.

Practical lighting, however, came very slowly. In 1792, a Mr. Murdoch illuminated his house with gas light, and a very poor show it is said to have been. He lived at Redruth, Cornwall.

In 1802, Birmingham, in celebrating the Peace of Amiens, brightened up a large factory with gas light. Thousands journeyed to see the wonderful sight—which led to gas works being established at that place, and in Manchester and Halifax.

In 1807 a German succeeded in lighting up one side of Pall Mall with gas. His name was Mr. Winsor, and shortly after his attempt the first London Coal Gas Company was incorporated in 1810.

AMERICAN DECORATIONS.

Woody has just grabbed the Nobel prize for nimble efforts in trying to book the League of Nations on the big time.

In view of the present condition of the League, this looks like a post-humorous decoration.

Europe and America are exchanging decorations. Every American who goes to Europe comes home with his chest looking like a Woolworth window on Saturday afternoon. A decoration is something like wearing a turkey feather in your buttonhole, and is no indication that you had a Thanksgiving dinner.

In order that no distinguished foreigner may go back empty chested. Congress is about to authorise the minting of decorations for the export trade. A distinguished foreigner is anybody who goes so far from home that the neighbors can't follow to squeal on him.

The Jitney Medallion, signifying a Chevalier of the Pay Station or Duke of the Subway Crush, will be the highest order that we can confer. With the possible exception of an income tax.

The Croix de Dime, for bravery in the Automat, will help to take distinguished foreigners' attention away from our Old Home Brew Weeks in the suburbs.

The Order of the Tip with twenty palms will be staked to all visitors who think that limburger is compulsory with hotel meals. The Insignia of the Bar Check is beyond our power to confer.

The Immortal Medal of the Street Car Service makes a neat but not gaudy decoration. The distinguished foreigner can take a straight Ten-cent badge or he can take an Eight-cent insignia with a Transfer.

We can't dub 'em knights, but we can knight 'em dubs. America is a democracy, but any time that an European king honors one of our citizens we can get even with him by making the king one of our citizens and letting the tax system take its course.

One of our most unsought-after prizes is the Decoration of the Traffic Cop with the Double Subpoena. The Unholy Writ of the Sheriff is also being distributed by the landlords on tenants who have earned the honor.

Foreign diplomats on their way over will be glad to know there are enough honors to go around.

New Board Has Difficult Task On C.E. Railway

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, January 11.—The recently elected Board of Directors of the Chinese Eastern Railway is, according to advices received from Harbin, finding it difficult to function. The railway is again losing money in considerable quantities, due principally to the dullness in business and the Chinese closing of the Manchuli frontier. Only about 250 freight cars a day are being loaded for hauling on the railway, while a minimum of 350 is, according to estimate, necessary to make the railway support its upkeep. Passenger traffic has not, for some years, ranked as a revenue-producer.

Friction between the Russian and Chinese members of the new Board is reported to have already developed. Little initiative is shown by any of the members with the exception of China's most experienced railroad man, C. C. Wang. By his endeavors to push things along, he is said, however, to have incurred the displeasure of the other members of the board, both Chinese and foreign.

Paris Press Gives Views On Election

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 10.—Commenting on yesterday's Senate elections in a leading article, the Temps, under the heading "Common-sense Elections," regards as their chief feature the fact that they maintain a nice political balance.

"The nation," it says, "has reasserted its unshakable will to uphold a Republican Government, based on order and progress.

"This will clearly appears in several party declarations. Thus the manifesto of the local Radical-Socialist party in the Department of Finistere affirms that 'the time of strife is over, and empty formula is a thing of the past.

"'The nation is for work and union, not for revolution.'"

The Temps dwells on the chasm between such a declaration and the subversive theories based on proletarian dictation and a struggle between class and class.

It believes that the election results will lead to the establishment in both Chambers of a strong majority, which it is now the Government's duty to lead in the nation's interest and for the nation's greatest good.
